WHAT'S HAPPENING...

Below is an edited version of a report from the Archdiocese of Melbourne website on the meeting this week in the USA between families and Pope Francis...

Pope Francis addresses World Meeting of Families in Philadelphia

A visibly moved Pope Francis ditched his prepared remarks in speaking to thousands of families gathered in Philadelphia Saturday night – giving an impromptu reflection on the beauty and dire importance of family life. 'The most beautiful thing that God did, the Bible says, was the family,' he said. The Pope voiced his thanks at 'the presence of all of you – who are a real witness that it's worth being a family!' A society 'is strong, solid and edified on beauty goodness and truth,' he added.

Pope Francis spoke after intense and often heartrending testimonies of several families from around the globe, who are at the World Meeting of Families. Families from as far as Nigeria, Australia, Jordan, Argentina and Ukraine shared their respective stories with the Pope, touching on themes that involved war, disability, economic uncertainty, discrimination and the death of children.

Francis embraced and spoke to each one after their testimonies, opting to set aside his prepared remarks when it came time for his address. 'God's love is so overflowing that it could not be egoistic, it had to be poured out of him,' the Pope said, explaining that this is what prompted the creation of the world. 'Family is really family when it is able to open its arms and receive all that love.'

However, 'that love God gave almost was lost,' he said. 'In a little time, the first crime, the first instance of fratricide, the first instance of war...men and women, through the astuteness of the devil, have unfortunately learned to divide themselves.' But God 'did not abandon them,' the Pope stressed. 'So great was his love that he began to walk with humanity, with his people until the right moment and he made the highest expression of love, his own son.'

'And how did he send his son?' he asked. 'Through a family.' The Pope then joked: 'sometimes people tell me 'Father, you speak like that because you are not married.' Families have difficulties...families, we quarrel. And sometimes plates can fly. Children bring headaches, and I won't even speak about mothers-in law...' 'In families there are always difficulties, but those difficulties are overcome by love,' he said. 'Hatred is not capable of dealing with any difficulty... Only love is able to overcome them.'

He then led a prayer to the Virgin Mary and Saint Joseph, invoking them 'to help us believe that it's worth the struggle and the fight, for the good of the family.'

For Masses 3/4 Oct:

XIV Ordinary Synod of Bishops, Rome- "Vocation & Mission of the Family in the Church and the Contemporary World". This is the second of two synods on the family called by Pope Francis and it starts on 7th October. He is relying on our prayers.
